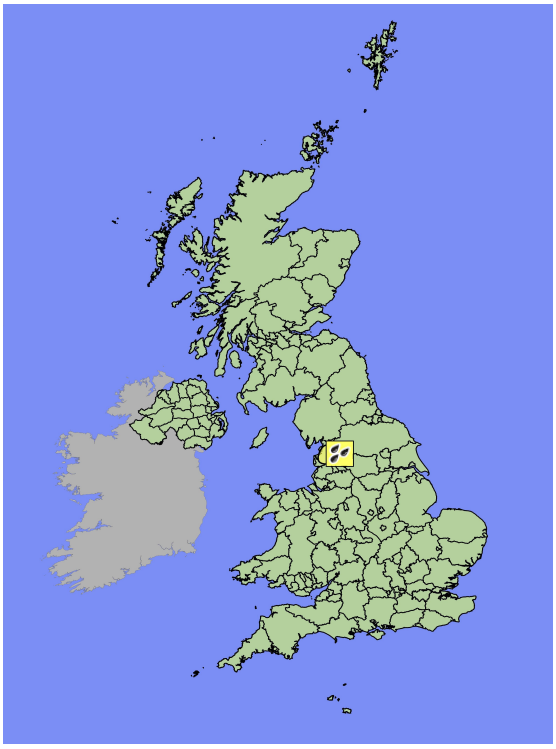
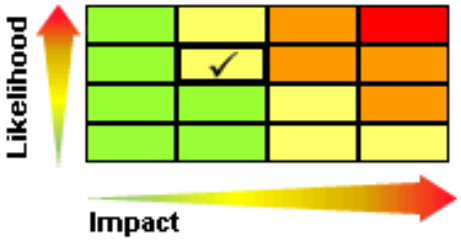
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
We are watching a zone of moisture which looks likely to de-stabilise, sparking off some heavy showers through Monday afternoon and evening, in very much the same areas as saw showers and thunderstorms during the small hours of Monday. Some places may see upwards of 20 or even 30 mm of rainfall in a relatively short space of time.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Mon, 09th Jul 2012 until 23:59 on Mon, 09th Jul 2012

Scattered heavy showers will continue to develop along a relatively narrow band aligned through northern parts of Lancashire.

Following earlier heavy rainfall, the public should be aware that this may lead to localised problems with surface water flooding.
